Wolters Kluwer to Join the Professionals at Online Information 2005

London, United Kingdom (November 29, 2005) - Wolters Kluwer, a leading publisher and information services company, is participating again at Online Information 2005, the world's largest annual event for the professional information community. This year, Wolters Kluwer is a platinum sponsor, and will showcase an extended family of online information products, services, and content. At its stands (# 150, 154, 190), attendees can view product demonstrations from brand leaders such as Ovid, Lippincott Williams & Wilkins, Adis, Croner, Lamy, Ipsos, Kluwer and CCH.

"We are pleased to be one of the Platinum Sponsors at Online Information 2005," commented Nancy McKinstry, CEO and Chairman of the Executive Board of Wolters Kluwer. "This is an excellent opportunity for us to meet with Wolters Kluwer's information users and demonstrate how our products can add value to their businesses."

The exhibition and conference kick off at 10:00 a.m. today and run through December 1 at the Olympia Grand Hall in London. Wolters Kluwer staff and representatives will be available for product presentations and hands-on demonstrations. In his moderator presentation on Thursday, December 1, at 9:30 a.m., Gary Foster, President and CEO of Wolters Kluwer Health's Medical Research unit, addresses "From Idea to Reality - the dangers of the current state of portals in the marketplace."

Exhibition and conference attendees can schedule meetings in advance by email at online@wolterskluwer.com or by telephone at +44 (0)207 598 5506.
